Performance begins before the curtain rises.

In performing arts spaces, every detail matters. Acoustics, sightlines, lighting — and seating. Auditorium seating is not an accessory to the design, it is a structural component of the audience experience. The right seating solution enhances architectural intent, supports acoustical performance and ensures comfort that never distracts from the stage.

We believe seating should serve both art and architecture — seamlessly.

Built for Standing Ovations

The performing arts move people. Seating should support that movement — physically, visually and acoustically. From concept through installation, Sedia Systems partners with architects, designers and venue operators to create seating solutions that elevate every performance.

Because when the curtain rises, every seat matters.
